sunday@subi to close with a bang

The City of Subiaco's final sunday@subi concert for 2013 will see Zydecats performing a mix of genres on Sunday 25 August.

Zydecats, which is made up of Lucky Oceans, Bill Rogers, Kent Hughes, Graham Bell and Ric Eastman, have been performing their music across Australia for twenty years.

Guitarist Kent Hughes said the band combined American folk and roots with swing, blues and rockabilly, which is also known as 'cats' music.

"We will perform using an eclectic range of instruments, including the electric and bass guitars, drums, vocals, saxophone, harmonica, rub-board, accordion and pedal steel guitar.

"The band will bring the audience an afternoon of music, such as zydeco, Cajun, country, blues and New Orleans rhythm," Kent said.

Tickets are available from 1.15pm on the day of the concert and are allocated on a first-come, first-served basis. All attendees must be present when the tickets are allocated. There will be a short break during the concert where attendees can enjoy a coffee or drink from the bar.

The sunday@subi free concert series covers a mix of themes and genres suitable for all ages. The concert is at 2pm at the Subiaco Arts Centre, 180 Hamersley Road, Subiaco.
