Stories from the road for sunday@subi

Jane Germain, Ian Simpson and The Yahoos will entertain at the city's sunday@subi concert on Sunday 4 August with an afternoon of bluegrass, blues, swing and country.

Jane Germain and Ian Simpson have a love of storytelling and use Jane's exotic family history and Ian's years on the road as influences.

Jane and Ian's affinity for each other shows through their unforced vocal harmonies and musical conversations.

Lead singer Jane Germain said they are looking forward to playing for the Subiaco community after their successful summer concert in 2010.

"We love what we do and feel a connection to the musical roots that Ian, The Yahoos and I share," Jane said.

Tickets are available from 1.15pm on the day of the concert and are allocated on a first-come, first-served basis. All attendees must be present when the tickets are allocated. There will be a short break during the concert where attendees can enjoy a coffee or drink from the bar.

The sunday@subi free concert series covers a mix of themes and genres suitable for all ages. The concerts run every Sunday until 25 August at 2pm at the Subiaco Arts Centre, 180 Hamersley Road, Subiaco.
