Local businesses adapt

While recent government directives have meant many shops and restaurants have had to close their doors during this difficult time, some local businesses are adapting in innovative ways.

The iconic and much-loved Subiaco Hotel is temporarily closed but has reopened its adjoining drive-through bottle shop that first started serving the community back in 1964.

Subiaco Hotel Owner Lawson Douglas said he wanted to support Western Australian families through the crisis by keeping people in jobs. Along with the newly opened drive-through, the hotel will be offering delivery to nearby suburbs, with free delivery to the suburbs located within its 5km radius.

Waste, recycling and green waste collection will continue as usual and our rangers are continuing their regular patrols. Playgrounds are also now closed in line with government directives.

The COVID-19 situation is evolving each day and the City’s priority will continue to be the community’s health and wellbeing. We will continue to make adjustments as necessary and as directed by the WA Department of Health.

For any questions, please contact us via email or phone at city@subiaco.wa.gov.au or 9237 9222.

Landlord drops Subiaco business a lifeline

A generous landlord has dropped a Subiaco business a lifeline during the coronavirus crisis, waiving rent for two months with the arrangements to be reviewed month-by-month thereafter.

George’s Meze has been a firm favourite in Subiaco since it opened in 2001, but with the government’s new health and safety measures, owners Eva and Nick thought they would have to close the doors for good.

While not every landlord will be in a position to do so, Eva and Nick’s landlord acknowledged the difficulties the business was facing and has provided some much-needed relief to allow the restaurant to continue operating in a takeaway capacity.

Mayor Penny Taylor said it was vital for the community to support local businesses and restaurants like George’s Meze where possible - now more than ever.

Read the full story at www.subiaco.wa.gov.au/news and if you’re a business owner, find out what support is available to you at a local, state and federal level on the City’s website.
Now more than ever, the Subiaco business community needs our support. Local businesses are keeping up to date with the latest information from the Health Department and adjusting accordingly, so we can continue to shop locally.

Here are 5 easy ways you can safely support your Subi local today.

1. Order takeaway or delivery from Subiaco’s many restaurants or a fancy dinner at home

2. Stay caffeinated with a coffee from one of Subi’s takeaway cafés

3. Get crafty by picking up art supplies or a take-home painting kit from Subiaco’s creative retailers

4. Go on a virtual shopping spree at Subiaco’s many online stores

5. Picnic at home with meats, cheese and fancy bread from Subi’s gourmet delicatessens

Our whole community is in this together and there are many ways we all can support each other through these uncertain times. Our local business community is working to adapt and serve in the safe ways it can.

Explore See Subiaco's website or follow local businesses on social media for the latest information. Subi businesses are at-the-ready with the services, menus, and tasty treats you know and love.

Thank you to all across our community for going above and beyond right now.

Mayor Penny Taylor

www.seesubiac0.com.au/subiaco-united

The information provided was correct at the time of printing. The continually evolving situation may cause further changes to business operations, so be sure to check online for latest updates.