Historical Notes	By c.1897, Perth Suburban Lots 298 and 299 (to the west of Fortune Street) had been laid out with 57 spacious residential lots (DP 895), while Lots 300 and 301 (to the east of Fortune Street) had been laid out with 61 smaller residential lots (DP 291). These had lot frontages to Railway Road, Waylen Road (southern side only), Morgan Street, Evans Street and Onslow Road (northern side only). Fortune and King Streets had also been surveyed as north-south cross streets. However, like many mid-late nineteenth century subdivisions in Subiaco, no residential development took place at that time. Evans Street had been identified in the Western Australian Post Office Directories by 1903, but the first resident was not listed until 1910. Despite its proximity to the West Subiaco Railway Station, which had opened in 1908, development was slow and there were only 4 residents listed in 1915, and 5 in 1920. Until this time Evans Street may have been little more than a track, as in April 1921 the Subiaco Council called tenders for the construction of approximately 22 chains (440m) of roadway in Evans Street, West Subiaco. Slow development in the early years may also have been influenced by ongoing problems with flooding associated with the nearby swamp (now Jualbup Lake). Despite these problems, the rate of development along Evans Street accelerated in the mid-1920s, as available land in Subiaco declined, and by 1925 there were 13 houses along the street, doubling to 26 by 1930. Little information is known about the people who constructed most of the early twentieth century houses, but builder/developers are known to have been active in Shenton Park in the mid-late 1920s. Lists of building licences published in the West Australian confirm that at least 7 of the houses erected in Evans Street in the period 1927 to 1933 were built by the following developers:

Since that time a number of additional houses have been erected on blocks that were subdivided following the demolition of an original house, and in 2015 there are 44 houses along the street.
