Bouquets of blooms

Tens of thousands of people flocked to the streets of Subiaco last weekend to celebrate Subi Blooms x Gather 2025.

In a touching gesture, volunteers from Recycled Blooms repurposed leftover flowers from the festival into bouquets, which were hand-delivered to new and expectant mothers, as well as hardworking healthcare staff, at King Edward Memorial Hospital and St John of God Subiaco Hospital.

Each bouquet was wrapped in paper that had been creatively decorated by students from

Mayor David McMullen said, "Community spirit has been woven throughout the festival weekend. The small gesture of delivering flowers to new mums and hospital staff has become a much-loved way of bringing Subi Blooms to a close each year."

Subi Blooms is presented by See Subiaco, a City of Subiaco initiative, in collaboration with Gather: A Floral Community.

Minute
with the MAYOR

A quick monthly update from
Mayor David McMullen

Subi Blooms is over for another year. The data will confirm if it was the biggest yet. But what we do know already is that it ticked all boxes: A great launch at a new local venue, with news coverage; activation and people everywhere; special family events; a new festival Village; and repurposed flower bouquets for new mums and healthcare workers at KEMH and St John of God Subiaco Hospital.

My thanks to all City staff, contractors and local businesses who made the weekend happen.

Final call for young artists

Submissions from school students across WA for the Shaun Tan Award for Young Artists are being accepted until Monday 19 May. This annual visual art award encourages and celebrates the imagination, innovation, and creativity of young artists across the state.

Visit www.subiaco.wa.gov.au/shauntanaward for more information and to make a submission.

From Sydney to Subiaco Library

Subiaco Library will be livestreaming a number of Sydney Writers' Festival events for free this May.

The sessions are part of the festival's 'Live & Local' program, which sees a selection of headline events streaming to libraries, theatres, and cultural venues Australia-wide from Thursday 22 to Sunday 25 May. Highlights include talks with Markus Zusak, Asako Yuzuki, and Ian Rankin.

Visit www.subiaco.wa.gov.au/events to see the full line-up.

Safer Shenton Park streets

The Safe Active Streets Evans Street to Keightley Road project was officially launched this week, with changes and road upgrades that will support safer, low-speed travel routes for people of all ages and abilities in Shenton Park.

The project, which is a Department of Transport initiative, involved significant community feedback and aims to create a more safe and attractive environment for cyclists and pedestrians to use the road safely alongside motorists and other road users.

The upgrades also form part of Perth's wider bicycle network, as they connect other travel routes and community amenities including the Shenton Park train station, Lake Juralbup, and Kings Park.

$3 native plants in May

City of Subiaco residents can purchase up to 80 native seedlings from Apace Nursery as part of the Native Plant Subsidy Scheme.

The scheme is running for the month of May, and is a great way to beautify your garden with plants that require little water and fertiliser, and also contribute to local biodiversity.

Amendments to Local Planning Policies for Residential Development

At its Ordinary Council Meeting on 29 April 2025, Council resolved to publicly advertise:

- Draft Local Planning Policy 1.1 – Residential Development (Low and Medium Density) (LPP 1.1); and
- Draft Local Planning Policy 1.2 – Residential Development (High Density) (LPP 1.2).

Both policies have been amended to align with the updated State Government Residential Design Codes. Amendments to LPP 1.1 incorporate provisions for medium density development, while amendments to LPP 1.2 remove medium density multiple developments from its scope.

The City invites public comment on both policies. For more information and to view the policies, please visit www.haveyoursay.subiaco.wa.gov.au.

Any comments should be submitted in writing before 5pm Sunday 25 May through the online submission form on the City's website, via email to city@subiaco.wa.gov.au or by mail, and addressed to the Chief Executive Officer, City of Subiaco, PO Box 270, Subiaco WA 6904.
