CITY OF SUBIACO Subiaco Scene

Let us know how we're tracking

The City is inviting community members aged 14 and over to take part in the 2026 MARKYT® Community Scorecard and share their feedback on the services, facilities and programs that help shape life in the City of Subiaco.

The Scorecard gives residents, visitors, and business owners an opportunity to rate the City's performance, identify areas for improvement, and highlight the priorities that matter most to the community.

It takes 5 to 10 minutes to complete, and also allows the City to track its performance over time, and help inform future planning and decision-making.

City of Subiaco Mayor David McMullen encouraged the community to have their say on what matters most to them.

"The MARKYT® Community Scorecard is an opportunity to share your experiences and priorities directly with the City. We have participated in the Scorecard for a number of years now, using it to track what we're doing well and where we can improve.

"It takes just a few minutes to complete the survey. The feedback helps us make informed decisions and do more of the things that matter to our community," he said.

Fill out the survey online at www.haveyoursay.subiaco.wa.gov.au/scorecard-2026 before Monday 9 November. Hard-copy surveys, including a reply-paid envelope, are available on request or can be collected from the City's Administration Building and Subiaco Library.

Verge Valet™ to return for bulk hard waste

The City is set to reintroduce an on-demand bulk hard waste collection service, via the Verge Valet™ system, giving residents greater flexibility while also delivering cost savings and improving street amenity.

The decision follows a tender process for the City's existing set-date bulk hard waste collection service, which did not receive a suitable submission.

Blooms wins big

Subi Blooms x Gather, Subiaco's annual Mother's Day weekend flower festival, took out the Economic Development Marketing and Promotion Award at the 2026 National Economic Development Awards for Excellence last week.

The award recognises the marketing campaign that promoted the 2026 festival, which strengthened the event's national profile and saw increased economic development benefits for the City.

Get spooky in Subi

'Spookiaco' festivities are kicking off next weekend across the Subiaco town centre, promising a fun and frightful weekend for all ages!

Presented by See Subiaco, the three-day program will include a massive public art installation called MONSTERS CAN'T FLY in Market Square Park, haunted walking tours with Oh Hey WA, spooky laneways along Rokeby Road, and a special Subi 'Fright' Market on Saturday 31 October, with Halloween-inspired eats and entertainment.

Check out the full line-up at www.seesubiaco.com.au/spookiaco.

Request a tree for free

City residents can now submit a request, if they have space on the verge adjacent to their property, for an additional native tree to be planted.

Native trees available within this new service have been carefully selected to suit local conditions and support a greener, healthier City. Planting the right tree in the right place can support the City's urban canopy and local wildlife, enhance neighbourhood amenity, and contribute to long-term sustainability efforts.

Budding authors awarded

Winners of the prestigious 2026 WA Young Writers Award were announced at a special ceremony on Monday 19 October.

This year, more than 750 entries from across the state were submitted, and Aiden Chin from Willetton Primary School took out the top gong for his story titled Four Words.

The award-winning stories and finalists' entries are currently on display at Subiaco Library until Sunday 11 November. Read the full list of winners and finalists at www.subiaco.wa.gov.au/news.
