New mural for Shenton Park

Shenton Park has gained a vibrant new mural, thanks to the collaborative efforts of Perth artist Olive Cheng and local students from Rosalie Primary School.

The City commissioned Olive Cheng – a local artist and former teacher – to run a creative workshop with the students to help design the area's latest public artwork.

The mural, fondly named 'Child's Play,' brightens up the concrete parkour elements and climbing wall in the Rosalie Park Mixed Use Space.

Mayor David McMullen said, "The final design of the pump track follows a multi-stage consultation process with our community and incorporates a lot of great ideas from the families and riders who will be using this new pump track.

"I'd like to thank everyone who got involved and helped us shape what is sure to be yet another fantastic addition to Rosalie Park.

"I'm looking forward to bringing my kids down to enjoy the new track once it's all finished."

Minute with the MAYOR

A quick monthly update from Mayor David McMullen

Last weekend, I spoke on 6PR along with one my Mayoral counterparts (Mayor Patrick Hall, City of Canning).

In addition to covering some shared issues of concern (Local Government and planning reforms, and the ongoing threat of shot-hole borer), I also said a bit about the recently-announced 'Subi Streets' project...and when prompted even revealed one of my favourite Subi coffee shops.

This interesting new segment, bringing together north and south of the river perspectives, may return in about a month.

Grant sends students to NASA

The City recently helped send a group of talented local students to NASA to represent Australia on the STEM world stage, where they placed second overall and saw one of their own receive a creative genius award.

The five Perth Modern students each received a Youth Achievement Grant from the City to represent the country at the International Space Settlement Design Competition.

The Australian team was the first fully public-school team to represent the country with 15-year-old, Oceana Oakley bringing home a creative genius award.

Community development grants open

The latest round of Community Development Grants are now open for individuals, community-based organisation and local groups. The grants focus on supporting programs, services and activities that promote wellbeing and contribute to an improved sense of belonging for the local community. Applications close Friday 27 September 2024. For more information, visit www.subiaco.wa.gov.au/commdevgrants or email culture@subiaco.wa.gov.au.

No More Blank Walls

The 'No More Blank Walls' street art festival is coming to Subiaco from 17 to 27 October, bringing more than ten murals, a pop-up gallery exhibition, community events, workshops, street art tours, mural battles, a festival hub and live art activities.

City of Subiaco Mayor David McMullen said, "'No More Blank Walls Subi' will enhance our City's aesthetic; elevate our reputation as a hub for culture and creativity; and inject moments of interest and curiosity into everyday life – as all good street art should."

'No More Blank Walls Subi' is presented by See Subiaco, a City of Subiaco initiative. For more, visit www.subiaco.wa.gov.au/news.

Forrest Walk open

The Forrest Walk Public Realm Upgrade is now complete and open to the public.

The project was designed to boost walkability, increase safety, and enhance community amenity and connectivity in the area between Rokeby Road and Rowland Street.

The existing artwork in Forrest Walk was retained and new artwork was integrated into the space using three concrete seating plinths – by renowned artist Jahne Rees, working with indigenous consultant Sharyn Egan.

Get involved in Subi Spritz 2025

Subi Spritz, presented by See Subiaco, is returning to the City from 14 to 23 March 2025, promising 10 days of activities evoking sun-soaked days in Southern Europe.

The festival celebrates Subiaco's rich history through events like pop-up restaurants, hands-on cooking workshops, deep dives into European beverages, outdoor live music and pop-up cinema.

AHOY Management (contracted festival organiser) is seeking Expressions of Interest from local businesses to get involved in this iconic event. Get in touch via hello@ahoymanagement.com. For more, visit www.subispritz.com.au.

Subi Spritz is proudly presented by See Subiaco, a City of Subiaco initiative.

Bus shelter replacement program

The City is currently removing some old bus shelters and installing new ones. There will be no disruption to bus services, however some bus stops may be without shelter during this transition. Shelters that have reached their end of life will be removed throughout September and October, with new shelters installed across October and November 2024. For more, email city@subiaco.wa.gov.au or call 9237 9222.
