

sunset@subi concerts kick off soon

The City's popular sunset@subi outdoor concert series is back for its 34th season to help you make the most of warm summer evenings.

Bring along a picnic or grab something from one of the delicious local eateries, before enjoying some live music as the sun goes down on a relaxed Sunday. A dessert van will be at each concert for those with a sweet tooth.

There will be six concerts from 19 December 2021 to 30 January 2022, with an Auslan interpreter present at all.

All concerts are free to attend and no bookings are required. It's free to park in Subipark car stations all weekend – no ticket required.

Heritage grants help conserve Subiaco's character

The City values its unique and rich heritage, and appreciates the dedication of home owners who work to conserve and enhance their heritage properties and, in turn, the heritage character of our suburbs.

Council recently awarded six grants for works to heritage properties at its November meeting, including a grant towards the reinstatement of a verandah to the original corner store at 142 Hensman Road.

Successful applicants were approved funding for conservation works which are in the public view and enhance and reveal the heritage significance of the property and/or urgent conservation works required in order to stabilise a building.

Free family activities at Subiaco Museum

Make your own Christmas Angel or Nutcracker to hang on your Christmas tree, play old-fashioned games, or learn how to write with a quill and dip pen at Subiaco Museum.

The museum is kicking off free activities for the whole family to help keep the kids or grandkids entertained while teaching them a thing or two about the past.

The activities all take place on Saturday morning and you can drop by anytime between 10.30am and 12pm, on 11 December, 5 February, 5 March, 2 April, 7 May or 4 June. – no bookings needed.

Council supports idea for artists' hub

The City will start investigations into whether an artists' hub in Subiaco is feasible.

The idea has been championed by Mayor David McMullen who said a hub could benefit local artists, as well as attract visitors and increase vibrancy in the City.

Investigations will include an overview of the arts sector in Subiaco, possible sites and funding resources, the type of support the City may be able to offer, and a recommendation on how the hub could be progressed if feasible.

City to reduce emissions by 826 tonnes

The City will be moving to renewable energy next year across a number of its sites, reducing emissions by an estimated 826 tonnes per year.

Last week, Council committed to a first-of-its-kind power-purchasing project that aims to reduce the amount of energy derived through fossil fuels by utilising local renewable energy sources, with the bonus of reducing energy supply costs.

The project will help the City achieve its ambitious carbon reduction targets and bolster the local renewable energy industry.

Finalisation of local planning policies

At the City of Subiaco Ordinary Council Meeting held on 23 November 2021, Council proceeded with the following local planning policies. All policies can be downloaded from www.subiaco.wa.gov.au.

Local Planning Policy 8.3 'Percent for public art and public realm' – introduces a requirement for developments in certain zones with a value of $2 million and above to contribute one per cent of their development cost to public art or public realm upgrades within the City of Subiaco.

Local Planning Policy 8.2 - 'Advertisements (signs)' – provides development control for advertisements (signs) including assessment and exemption criteria.

Local Planning Policy 7.3 'Public consultation for planning proposals'

– provides guidance regarding public consultation for planning proposals.

Design Review Panel

The City is seeking expressions of interest for Design Review Panel membership for 2022-2024. The panel provides independent expert advice on development and planning proposals facilitating a high quality design of the built environment.

People who demonstrate a high level of expertise with appropriate qualifications and/or substantial experience in related disciplines are encouraged to nominate. Nominations are also called for a chairperson.

For more information, including the nomination criteria, visit the Other Planning Matters page on the City's website.
