

Grant helps create a warm welcome for local school

A City grant has helped make a new mural at Rosalie Primary School possible to create a more vibrant, welcoming and inspiring school entrance.

About 200 students, from pre-primary to year six, contributed to the painting of the mural overseen by artist Mel McVee.

Mayor David McMullen described the finished mural as a community asset.

He said, "Art helps build community and sense of place. This mural is an attractive new visual feature for the school and wider Shenton Park community. There will be a sense of community ownership, due to inputs from the many students who contributed to the mural; they should be very proud of what they and Mel have created."

A spring makeover for Walmsley Lane

Colourful artworks, vibrant greenery, festive-style lighting and sunshine yellow seating have brought a burst of life to a little Subiaco laneway this spring.

Tucked off Rokeby Road, Walmsley Lane is named after West Walmsley, the stationmaster at Subiaco Railway Station between 1915 and 1922.

The busy laneway is the first to be given a makeover as part of the City's ongoing Greenwalks project, which aims to improve the usability and character of a number of small laneways and pedestrian routes that intersect with Rokeby Road.

Once you've visited the updated Walmsley Lane, you're invited to express your feedback and ideas by Sunday 22 October via www.haveyoursay.subiaco.wa.gov.au/greenwalks.

City to reduce carbon emissions further

The City will reduce its CO2 emissions by about 31.5 tonnes and save just over $250,000 each year by transitioning a number of fleet vehicles to electric.

This week Council gave the green light to the move which will also see the supply and installation of 12 electric chargers at three City facilities; these locations all come under the City's power purchasing agreement which provides carbon neutral electricity.

Seddon Street upgrade to be celebrated

The City's upgrade of the Seddon Street public realm is set to open this October, revealing a new pedestrian focussed space for the community.

The upgrade – delivered with support from Blackburne – is the latest public realm upgrade to open after the City completed works at Postal Walk in August.

Mayor David McMullen said, "The City is investing in shared public spaces, like Seddon Street and the newly opened Postal Walk, to continue to improve amenity and walkability of key areas and encourage visitation and community use.

"These upgrades are part of the ongoing renewal of some key nodes that will help generate momentum for our City."

A market event – presented by Blackburne in partnership with the City – will help celebrate the opening of the Seddon Street upgrade and launch Blackburne's ONE Subiaco development on Saturday 7 October.

Museum storage gets some TLC

A ceiling collapse prompted some much-needed TLC for part of the Subiaco Museum's collection tucked away in storage after part of it came down in heavy rain.

Luckily, no items were damaged and the team were able to get a new ceiling sorted and give the facility some TLC to the benefit of the objects.

Subiaco Museum Coordinator Jessica Marantelli said the upgrade to the storage space was not only practical but showed the City's commitment to preserving and showcasing the area's important history.

"The upgrade means we can now access these stored objects more easily and ensures we're looking after them all for future generations," she said.
